TALKING ABOUT
DISARMAMENT
LET'S DISARM
THE BOY AUTO
DRIVER.

A frightful flood almost wiped out Pueblo, Colo., the other day. The angry, surging waters did claim hundreds of victims and millions of property. Congress has appropriated $1,000,000 for the sufferers.

The Times is informed that the completion of the referendum petitions throughout the State is now assured, and that the so-called "consolidation" bills passed by the last Legislature will be referred to the people for their approval of what many consider to be the most vicious and partisan legislation ever attempted to be saddled on a "free" people.

The report of the State Tax Commission calls for a boost in the assessed valuation of the property of Missouri to about twice what it was in 1920. To be exact, the raise over last year is $1,954,621,269, making a total assessment for the present year of $4,670,816,155. Yet we understand the war is over. But it is not entirely beyond the realm of possibility there may be trouble if some effort is not made toward reducing taxation, rather than doubling it up in such manner, in times of peace. The people in general already have an ear full of such high-handed practices.
